purpose platforms such as google search, twitter hashtags, google street view and YouTube to re-contextualise and deploy new meanings.

Sandra Crisp's urban visuals merge with dislocated YouTube videos; disembodied voices; futuristic tree-clad architecture; Geodesic domes and a complex unpopulated landscape with an ambiguous spherical central form. All emphasise the fragmentary nature of found online material and today's saturation of images and information, while Allie Litherland questions our connectedness and technologies translation of emotions.

PolakVanBekum identifies the gap between the real and the automated world though a glitch journey of google street view and 'binaural' recordings from the perspective of a mail bag – we hear what the bag would be hearing, if only it had ears. Jonathon Monaghan's film Mothership is a mystical and satirical critique on power, wealth and the role of technology in the digital age. A journey through absurd and whimsical environments, the work draws broadly on references to ancient mythology, science fiction, architecture and corporate branding.

Ulu Braun employs playful and visually dense digital collages, associative tableaux that collate an 'alternate' vision of our world, where nature invades the urban (and vice-versa). We're transported by a comforting narrator through post-apocalyptic, post-capitalist habitats, where the material co-exists with the metaphysical, the literal alongside the figurative. Andrei Tănăsescu, from Bucharest International Experimental Film Festival, described 'Arhitektura echoes our civilisation's childlike ingenuity in creation and destruction, as we question the inheritance we pass on to our future generations'.

Chris Paul Daniels' You Are a Powerhouse! was commissioned by HOME (a new multimillion arts centre in Manchester, England) as part of the exhibition 'SAFE' based on Todd Haynes' film of the same name. A bombardment of cultural references, fictional corporate case studies and empty rhetorical wordplay collide; aligning commercial self-help theory and the emphasis on the individual to independently solve complex situations with the current political lexicon. Daniels explores broader institutional critiques and the pressured expectations of the arts centre to fully engage communities and deliver transformative experiences within an austerity context.

Other Than Our Sea by Valentina Ferrandes is a story of exploration told through fragments of classical literature, flashes of ethnographic films and manipulated excerpts of current newsreels, from the relics of an ancient Greek colony in Southern Italy to modern day shipwrecks in the Mediterranean. Referencing the recent and tragic drowning of thousands of migrants from Northern Africa seeking asylum in Europe, Other Than Our Sea collapses visual cues to embroider an enigmatic idea of traveling at sea in times of conflict. Other Than Our Sea is a Jury Selection at Japan Media Arts Festival 2016.

Established in 1999, Visions in the Nunnery offers an informed overview of the provocative and quick-changing mediums of moving image and performance. The 2016 exhibition, celebrating the show's tenth edition, showcases over 100 artists' work through an innovative six-part programme, punctuated by events featuring live performances in the gallery and its unique Victorian enclosed courtyard. The show was selected from over 1,500 international submissions by curators Cinzia Cremona and Tessa Garland.

Get in the party mood by contributing to the collective dining experience Dinner 59 by Irina Danilova & Hiram Levy, which invites audiences to 'Open your recipe book at page 59, cook that dish and bring it to the Nunnery to share'. Tritotetartes will then provide a closing spectacular catwalk event led by a post-punk, post-internet, post-avant-garde drag queer collective from Greece.

In Pimpin' yo mama/papa crib Saberova questions 'Babies as lux commodities. Mothers as sex commodities. Father's input and outlook on caring?'

DINNER 59 is an ongoing project of 59 dinners, cooked every 59 days from cookbook recipes on pages #59, on or around special days in the Project 59 Calendar:
